Prelude

First movement from Suite No. 5 in C, Z. 666

Henry Purcell
1659-93

$\text{♩} = c.84$

Henry Purcell, one of the greatest of all English composers, began his career as a chorister in the Chapel Royal. In 1677 he was appointed composer for the King's Violins, and two years later succeeded his teacher John Blow as organist of Westminster Abbey. In 1682 he was appointed organist of the Chapel Royal. Like Mozart and Schubert, he died when only in his thirties.

Most significant among Purcell's keyboard works is the posthumous Choice Collection of Lessons, which consists of eight suites, each in three or four movements: Prelude – Allegro – Coranto, followed by a finale, which might be a saraband, hornpipe or minuet. Some of the preludes – particularly that of Suite No. 5, selected here – are like forerunners of Bach's two-part Inventions. The first period – the musical equivalent of a sentence – (bbs. 1–16) has a contrapuntal texture and a clearly defined subject, as in a fugue. It climaxes with a statement of the subject in inversion (b. 12). The second period begins in two-part imitation (bbs. 18–20), but then changes to a free-voiced texture and introduces a new motive (b. 20) that dominates the last 12 bars. The dynamics are editorial suggestions only.
