

225 American English Verb

Key Points About Prepositions

A preposition is a word which comes before a noun or a pronoun and shows the relationship between that noun or pronoun and other words in the sentence.

- This is the charger for my cell phone. The preposition for shows the relationship between the charger and the cell phone.
- Jack works with his brother. The preposition with shows the relationship between Jack and his brother.

Some prepositions are used to show the location of a noun or pronoun:

- The dog is sleeping on the sofa. The preposition on shows the location of the dog.
- There is a pen near the book. The preposition near shows the location of the book.

Other prepositions are used to show time and directional relationships:

- I took a nap after lunch. The preposition after relates to the time of the nap.
- Jack took a train to Manhattan. The preposition to shows the direction of the train.

Note also that to is used in the infinitive form (to + verb) of the verb. Many verbs are followed by an infinitive form, and as such those have not been included in this book:

- I like to eat pizza.
- We want to see a movie tomorrow.

In many cases, prepositions pair with verbs and adjectives as collocations. In this book, I am going to focus on 225 of these combinations of verbs and prepositions. I am also going to show you some informational columns where we will look at the prepositions themselves, what they mean and how they are used.

These preposition and verb combinations need to be memorized. I hope this book, and the lessons in it help you do that. As always, thanks for
